

May Get OK On Arsenal Office Layout

Approval is being sought for a new administration building on the Kankakee unit of the Joliet Arsenal, with cost estimated at $500,000.

According to information at the ammunition center, no formal approval has been granted from Washington and the building which would serve 200 employes is only in the "talking stage."

AT PRESENT the U. S. Rubber company, which has the contract for operating the Kankakee unit, shares the office building utilized by the Ordnance Ammunition Center. However, the space in the present administration building is vitally needed by the OAC.

If the new building is approved, it would provide headquarters for offices of the U. S. Rubber company, it was learned.